

CCR lab - Marking Period Reflection

Essential Questions:

1. How can reflection help us further our own learning?
2. How do we find evidence of our work habits, the quality of our work, and our cooperation with teachers?

Concept(s):

1. Personal growth as a student requires honest reflection on one's work habits, the quality of one's work, and one's cooperation with teachers.
2. One can find evidence of her/his work habits, work quality, and cooperation with teachers by examining work artifacts and asking others for feedback.
3. Honest reflection can help a student create realistic goals for her/his growth as a learner.

Objective(s):

The student will be able to:

1. Identify and evaluate specific work habits that impact her/his learning.
2. Cite examples of, and evaluate, the general quality of her/his work.
3. Cite examples of, and evaluate, her/his success in cooperating with teachers.
4. Explain how her/his work habits have impacted her/his learning.
5. Explain how the general quality of her/his work has impacted her/his grades.
6. Explain how her/his interactions with CCR teachers have impacted her/his learning.
7. Identify one important skill that she/he has learned.
8. Tell how she/he knows that an identified skill has been learned, and explain why this skill is important.
9. Set one realistic goal for the next marking period, in terms of improving and/or refining her/his work habits.
10. Set one realistic goal for the next marking period, in terms of improving and/or refining her/his interactions with CCR teachers.

Method(s):

1. Hand out reflection sheets and explain the different sections. Check for understanding and clarify misconceptions.
2. Hand out CCR rubrics and have students use these to begin the process. Stop and re-define task as needed.
3. Circulate and provide individual help as needed.
